OFFICERS OF THE CLASS.

Orator for Class Day	J. C. CARTER.
Port " "	JOHN NOBLE.
Edist " "	W. S. THAYER.
" at Class Supper	JOHN S. WHITING.

Class Committee :

J. H. THAYER. F. D. WILLIAMS. CHARLES HALE.

Subsequently (owing to death and absence)

JOHN NOBLE. CHARLES S. LINCOLN.
GEORGE F. RICHARDSON.

Class Secretary :

CHARLES HALE.*

JOEL SEAVERNS, from 1882 until his death in 1894.

J. HENRY THAYER, from March 27, 1894.

Class Treasurer :

GEORGE M. HOBBS.

* From his entrance on public service in 1864 until his death, the Secretary's duties were in the main discharged by Noble, as Chairman of the Class Committee.

THIS new edition of the pamphlet which was printed in 1895 as a tardy reparation for the complete loss of the Class Records in the "Boston fire," must be described, like its predecessor, as "fragmentary, provisional, and sadly lacking in proportion." Yet for whatever enlargement and correction it shows, the Secretary would make his acknowledgments to several classmates, in particular the Chairman of the Class Committee. Certain surviving members, however, who seem to have taken as their rule of life the maxim, made familiar to us in our school-days, — "qui bene latuit bene vixit," — have successfully withstood all endeavors to entice them from their privacy. Into it courtesy seems to the Secretary to forbid further attempts at intrusion.

But incomplete and unsatisfactory as the record in many respects is, it will not put our alma mater to the blush, and may serve, on this the fiftieth anniversary of our graduation, as a reminder of happy days and helpful companionships.

COMMENCEMENT,
June 27, 1900.

Degrees, etc.: Phi Beta Kappa; LL.B., 1853; LL.D., 1885; Overseer of Harv.; Hon. Member of the Colonial Soc. of Mass.

Professional Labors, Offices, Publications, etc.: He has been concerned in many celebrated suits at law, among them the difficult and numerous litigations over the will of Madame Jumel; a long series for the city of N. Y., growing out of the frauds of the "Tweed Ring," the principal one of which ended in a judgment against Tweed of between six and seven millions of dollars; important suits in Admiralty, raising questions of the interpretation of the Navigation Laws of the U. S., which were finally carried to the Supreme Court; numerous important litigations, several involving many millions of dollars, which were carried up to the Court of Appeals of New York; also cardinal R. R. cases, such as "The Nebraska Rate Cases," so-called, the "Missouri Transportation Case," the "Joint Traffic Transportation Case" — all of which were carried up to the Supreme Court of the U. S. Before that court, too, he made the principal argument on the first hearing of the Income Tax case. In addition to his part in these celebrated legal controversies, he was a member of the Commission appointed by Gov. Tilden for drafting a constitutional provision for the administration of municipal governments in the State of New York, and drew up the Commission's report; by appointment of Gov. Hill he was a member of the Constitutional Commission for framing a judicial system for the State of N. Y. ; he was for several years the principal opponent before the N. Y. Legislature and Governor of the proposed enactment of a Civil Code, drawn up and urged by the late David Dudley Field. In connection with this labor he published in 1883, a monograph on "The Proposed Codification of our Common Law," and subsequently discussed the subject more elaborately before the State Bar Association of Virginia, under the title, "The Provinces of the Written and the Unwritten Law;" and before the Amer. Bar Association at Saratoga in the annual address for 1885, on "The Ideal and the Actual in the Law." All these discussions received high praise from distinguished lawyers. He took a leading part in establishing the "Bar Association" of New York city, and has twice served as its president — for two years some twenty years ago, and again for the last three years; he has also been president of the Amer. Bar Association; first president of the Assoc. of the Harv. Law School; president of the Alumni Assoc. of Harvard, and of the Phi Beta Kappa Society, and of the Harvard Club of New York city. He gave the address two years ago at Charlottesville, Va., before the Univ. of Va., on occasion of the dedication of its new buildings, erected in place of those destroyed by fire, which address was entitled, "The University of Virginia and Jefferson its Father." He has interested himself in the reform of the municipal administration of New York city, and was for several years president of the "City Club," established to accomplish that result.

Died at Alexandria, Egypt, April 10, 1864.

Remarks :

“ Yet doubt not, Sumner, in some happier year,
That wrong and misery shall disappear ;
That sacred Peace, before whom thou didst pour
Thy shining well-earned wealth of classic lore,
Shall walk the earth with more majestic tread,
With her celestial glories garlanded.
The angel voice, that, falling clear and calm,
Woke the rapt shepherd resting 'neath the palm,
And found an echo in each moon-lit hill
Of old Judea, shall yet creation fill, —
Peace upon earth and unto men goodwill.
The blood-stained butcher of his fellow-men
Shall sink in drear oblivion's darkest den ;
But thou, who for the Truth's dear sake didst bear
Her cross of Shame, shall in her triumph share.”

From a poem written during his senior year, and published in the “ National Era.”

CLASS ODE.

By WILLIAM SYDNEY THAYER.

FAIR Harvard! the day of departure has come,
 And we bid thee a final adieu ;
 Yet, ere we go forth, for thy motherly care
 We our blessings and thanks would renew.
 Though the dread future's darkness a shadow will cast
 On the thick-coming thoughts of this hour,
 Fond memory clings to each scene in the past
 As the honey-bee clings to the flower.

Thy sons of the old time, those giants, have borne
 The torch-light of knowledge abroad,
 Through storm and through quiet have guided the State
 And have led the weak soul to its God.
 If the heights of their greatness we never may reach,
 Their example still shines on our way ;
 And we hope, alma mater, to prove that ourselves
 Are as worthy thy rearing as they.

When back to the past our affections are called
 By the low chime of memory's bell,
 Shall not the sweet friendships uniting us here
 Throw o'er us their magical spell?
 Let us trust, as we sing round the time-honored tree,
 Hand in hand, the old song of "Lang Syne,"
 That our brotherly union unbroken shall be
 Beyond even death's drear confine.

O, Angel of Fate! thou hast not to our eyes
 Thy mysterious volume unrolled,
 And in the dim future we only discern
 Its closely barred gates of bright gold ;
 Yet, whatever may come, alma mater, we know
 That the love of thy children towards thee
 Shall continue to flow till thine own river Charles
 Shall have rolled his last wave to the sea !

O D E

FOR THE

SUPPER OF THE CLASS OF 1850,

Commencement Night, July 17, 1850,

BY JOHN SAMUEL WHITING.

AIR: — "Some love to roam."

WE have met to part, and though heart with heart
One golden cord may twine,
We shall meet no more as we 've met before
In the happy days lang syne.
Only made to break are the bonds we make,
Farewell is love's watchword here,
And but scarcely dry is the saddened eye
Ere 't is wet with another tear.

Yet so dark o'erhead was the mist ne'er spread
But that blue peeped out between,
And across our sky flew the cloudlets by
With a rainbow's gladsome sheen.
O, the wise take life as they would a wife,
For better or for worse,
Though a checkered scene be their path between
The cradle and the hearse.

This life 's a race, an eternal chase,
And we are the tortured game ;
Close on our track is a grisly pack,
And Death is their leader's name.
Time 's like the breeze ; then 't is best to seize
The moments as they fly ;
We can take a flight towards heaven to-night,
To-morrow we must die.

When the toils and tears of the rolling years
Shall have touched our little band,
In our hearts we'll trace every classmate's face,
And grasp every classmate's hand.
 Gray-headed sires by our parlor fires,
 We'll sadder thoughts exclude,
 While we drink the praise of our College days
 And "College Scenes" reviewed.

'T is a harsh command that will hand from hand
 Compel us now to part;
Yet where 's the sword can divide the cord
 Which binds us heart to heart.
 We will hope the rays of success may blaze
 Our future years upon,
But we'll shout huzza, with a hip, hurrah,
 And drink to the good times gone.
